and has issued a manifesto to the people of France.

LATER. In his manifesto to the French people, dated from Brussels, General Boulanger says: "The Government attempted to cover M. Bouvier, Public Prosecutor, into indicting him before a unique tribunal, under a unique law, and because M. Bouvier refused, he was dismissed from his position. The General says that he refuses to submit to the jurisdiction of the Senate, because it is blinded with ambition and with narrowness. The General is unpopular. He considers it a duty of a Frenchman to exercise his suffrage to prohibit and to refuse to recognize any arbitrary attempt to suppress the liberties of the people, or any attempt to tamper with the laws of the country. General Boulanger concludes by stating that he is willing to appear for trial before judges who are independent of the influence of political parties—parties which are corrupting, imposing taxes, and which are returning to France he intends to avoid the result of the approaching elections, which he believes will make France habitable, honest, and free."

While at Mons, in Belgium, General Boulanger met and had a long interview with M. Koekkoef, the well-known French journalist. M. Koekkoef, a member of the French Chamber of Deputies who is being tried by the Senate for his connection with the suppressed Patriotic League, has announced that the Government imposed executing General Boulanger. He also states that the leaders of the Boulanger party intend to continue to agitate for a reform of the Constitution.

M. Desfosses has denounced the action of the French Cabinet in constituting the Senate for the purpose of trying the deputies. He declares that the Senate is a hostile and unnatural tribunal, and says that the deputies are prepared to appear before the military judges.

LONDON. 27th March. The paper published this morning partakes of the character of the Czar of Russia. Both the English and German papers travelling in a train from St. Petersburg to Gracchino, in which it was discovered that an attempt had been made to wreck the train by placing two rails across the line. The discovery was only made as the Imperial train was approaching, but the rails were removed in time to prevent any disaster.

LONDON. 29th March. Several arrests have been made of persons connected with the secret bomb factory recently discovered at Zembla in Silesia.

The investigation which has been made has disclosed the existence of a large dynamite conspiracy against the Czar and his Ministers.

Arrangements are being made for the adoption of a commercial reciprocal treaty between France and Italy.

LONDON. 29th March. The King, Bishop of Lincoln, for ritualistic practices, has been condemned. The Bishop before whom the case was heard, has reserved judgment.

The French Government intend to proceed with the prosecution of General Boulanger in his absence, as should a conviction be obtained, it will render him ineligible for a seat in Paris.

M. Rothschild, in an article, impugns that the French Government have a scheme for the immediate overthrow of the Czar.

It is announced that a meeting of the National Committee, only in a small number, discussing general policy, will be held in France.

General Boulanger's flight is causing the suspicion of a number of Royalists from among his supporters, who accuse him of cowardice.

A large number of the French newspapers regard General Boulanger for leaving French territory, and the Londoner says that he deserted and like a defaulter cashier.

General Boulanger has been interviewed in Russia. He says that he was advised to turn to France by his principal supporters.

LATER. It is stated that General Boulanger intends leaving Brussels and coming to London.

M. Quesnel, the new French Procurer-General, General Boulanger, in which his military career is brought up to the time of his recall from command of the troops of occupation of Tunis, is induced to set aside the General's ambition to become a Minister, but to his installation for the overthrow of the Constitution entered into complicity with the suppressed Coptic League. The indictment also definite charges General Boulanger with having entered into a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the Republic.

LONDON. 30th March. After a stormy sitting, the French Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 125, passed a vote of censure on General Boulanger, and voted him overthrown. The M.M. Party and Dasson threatened M. M. with violence, if he was censured for their conduct.

The Opportunist and Radical journals do not expect that the Senate will deprive General Boulanger of his military rank and all his rights, thus rendering him incapable of being a candidate for the general election.
